Parker Tells Them Not to Tolerate Interference—Lawrence Murder Cited.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Nov. 9.—Judge Charles W. Parker, Presiding Judge of Morris County, called the Grand Jury before him this morning and charged them that any attempt to influence them in their deliberations would justify them in finding a prompt indictment against the offenders.

An attempt had been made, he intimated, to influence the Grand Jury in its consideration of the murder of 11-year-old Janette Lawrence of Madison, who was stabbed to death the night of Oct. 6. The Madison Borough Council asked Prosecutor of the Pleas, John M. Mills, to postpone action and to withdraw from the case, in which event the Attorney General of the State would take charge.

"When authorized persons undertake to control the official conduct of a Prosecutor or a Grand Jury or individual member thereof in their official capacities it is a misdemeanor at the common law," said Justice Parker.
